Former Miami Dolphins defensive lineman Ndamukong Suh, the highest-paid player on the team before his release in March, sold his Fort Lauderdale home at a $650,000 loss.

Working through the TwoOneSeven Revocable Trust, Suh bought the 11,092-square-foot home at 1717 Middle River Drive for $6.5 million in 2015. He sold it in April – one month after his release by the team – for $5.85 million to Ryan Collison and Liliana Collison.

The home was built on the 20,461-square-foot site along the New River in 2013. It has six bedrooms, seven bathrooms, a pool, a rooftop terrace and a gym.

Suh didn't leave South Florida empty handed. He signed a six-year, $114.4 million contract with the Dolphins in 2015, with a $25.5 million signing bonus and about $60 million in guarantees. It was the biggest contract for a defensive player in NFL history.

After his release from Miami, Suh signed a one-year, $14 million deal with the Los Angeles Rams.
